

SILLIMAN COLLEGE

CLASS OF 2021

CLASS OF 2021

WELCOME TO SILLIMAN!

Undergraduate life at Yale College is organized around fourteen residential colleges where students live, eat, attend seminars and workshops, and participate in intellectual, artistic, and social activities. Each college is a cohesive community with its own character and traditions. A Head and Dean live in each college with their families, and there are apartments where faculty members live as Resident Fellows.

Silliman is the largest college at Yale, occupying most of a city block. Whereas other colleges house their first-year students on Old Campus, first-year students in Silliman College, Benjamin Franklin College, Pauli Murray College, and Timothy Dwight College enjoy the privilege of living in their own colleges. Silliman's courtyard alternates as an informal athletic field, a site for college festivities, and a place for quiet repose. Over one hundred members of the faculty, staff, and administration are Fellows of Silliman, and they are invited to eat in the college dining hall and participate in college activities. The aim is to promote interchange between faculty and students.

Silliman offers a wide range of activities and is known for the enthusiasm of its students. It is a truth, universally acknowledged, that Silliman is the most awesome college at Yale. Through participation in college activities, conversations in the dining hall, and a wide variety of social activities, students create the intellectual and cultural atmosphere that is the foundation of college life.

HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE

Benjamin Silliman (1779-1864), Yale Class of 1796, was one of America's pioneers in science. Although Silliman graduated knowing nothing of the natural sciences, President Timothy Dwight asked him (to avoid hiring a foreigner with whom Puritan manners and morals might not sit well) in 1802 to become Yale's first science professor, teaching chemistry and natural history. Silliman proved to be eminently capable and delivered Yale's first science lecture in 1804. Soon afterward, President Dwight sent him to Europe to purchase scientific equipment, books for the College Library, and a cabinet of two thousand minerals to begin the study of mineralogy at Yale. After his return, he played a leading role in the foundation of the Yale Medical School, the Peabody Museum, and the American Journal of Science, a scientific periodical still published today. In 1852, Silliman was instrumental in the founding of the Yale School of Engineering, a pioneering event in professional scientific education in the United States. To honor such a towering figure in the history of science at Yale and in America, our college was named after Benjamin Silliman.

Silliman College opened in September of 1940. It was the last of the original ten Yale residential colleges to be completed. The Vanderbilt-Sheffield dormitories and Byers Hall (now the Common Room, Dining Hall, Sillibrary, and Head's and Dean's Offices), dating from the early 1900s, were retained in the plans. All of the brick structures, including the Head of College

House, were built between 1938 and 1940. Over the years, our college has evolved from a dormitory intended for science students to a diverse yet cohesive residential community. Sparing its first-year students from the disorder of living on Old Campus, Silliman is the largest in area of all the colleges. Our buildings boast a tremendous array of facilities, including a movie theater, digital arts lab, art gallery, library, kitchen, aerobics and dance studio, art studio, basketball court, weight and fitness room, sound studio, game room, and buttery.

The colors in Silliman's seal refer to the four elements of the ancient philosophers: red represents fire; white represents air and water; and green represents the earth. It also carries the golden acorns from the family crest of Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Yale Class of 1876, whose bequest funded Silliman's construction. Because of its legendary associations with fire, the salamander was selected as the college symbol. Our friends call us Sillimanders.

Our patron, Ben Silliman

ADMINISTRATION AND STAFF

Laurie Santos, Head of College

Laurie Santos, a Professor in the Department of Psychology and the interdisciplinary Cognitive Science Program, assumed responsibility as HoC in July of 2016. HoC Santos is a cognitive psychologist who studies what makes the human mind unique by exploring how animals think about the world. She studies the origins of human cognition by focusing on two different groups of animals: non-human primates (our closest living evolutionary relatives) and domesticated dogs (the species that lives most closely with humans). She is director of the Comparative Cognition Laboratory (“CapLab”) and the Canine Cognition Center at Yale. HoC Santos studies the evolutionary origins of both our smarter human capacities— such as our ability to think about what other people think and our capacity to learn from others’ teaching— and our not-so-smart capacities— such as our irrational economic biases and errors. Her “monkeynomics” studies on the later topic were featured in a 2010 TED talk which has been seen by over one million viewers.

HoC Santos received her A.B. in psychology and biology (1997) and Ph.D. in psychology (2003) from Harvard University. She joined Yale’s faculty in 2003 and was awarded tenure in 2010. Head of College Santos has been recognized widely for her excellence in research and teaching. Her work has been featured in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Economist, and The New Yorker. She is the recipient of the Stanton Prize from the Society for Philosophy and Psychology for outstanding contributions to interdisciplinary research. She was recently voted as one of Popular Science Magazine’s “Brilliant 10” young minds, and was described in Time Magazine as a “Leading Campus Celebrity.” In 2012, she was awarded the The Lex Hixon ’63 Prize for Excellence in the Social Sciences.

Mark Maxwell, Associate Head

Head of College Santos is joined by her husband, Mark Maxwell. Mark is currently a PhD Student working on his dissertation in the Department of Philosophy at Yale. His work in metaphysics and philosophy of science draws on his background in physics (He received his B.S. in physics at MIT) to investigate how laws of nature help structure our understanding of the world. Before coming to Yale, Mark worked as a computer programmer and then as a professional poker player, both of which continue to influence his approach to philosophy.

Leanne Barlow, Dean

Dean Barlow earned her B.S. summa cum laude in Public Health and Social Justice from the University of Massachusetts; her M.P.A. from Cornell University’s Institute for Public Affairs; and her Ph.D. in Politics from Brandeis University.

At Brandeis she taught courses in the Politics Department on comparative politics, social movements, and extreme party politics in Europe. A scholar who has received numerous awards and fellowships, Dean Barlow studies a broad range of issues in politics, among them political party development, local government, and ethnic conflict and nationalism.

Dean Barlow comes to Yale with experience in residential advising and mentoring undergraduates. Since 2014, she has served as a sophomore adviser at Harvard College’s Winthrop House, providing pre-major academic guidance to its undergraduates. She has also served as Lead Tutor for Winthrop’s CARE (Consent Advocate & Relationship Educator) program, its Lead First-Generation Tutor, and its Lead BGLTQ Tutor. Before advising at Harvard, she served as a mentor and adviser to Brandeis students, many of them the first in their families to attend college, and facilitated workshops in study skills, campus resources, and healthy relationships.

In her spare time, Dean Barlow enjoys reading and watching mysteries (ask her about Poirot, The Fall, Happy Valley or just about any British mystery series that the BBC has to offer), as well as traveling abroad, baking bread, and trying out new exercise classes like spin and barre. She loves to talk about pop culture, the latest in podcasts, and her favorite weather blog, “Weather Wisdom”.

First-year counselors are pillars of the first-year community. These upperclassmen have been appointed, albeit through a rigorous selection process, to be key members of the senior class who play an integral role in helping you adjust to life at Yale. First-year counselors (aka FroCos) assist, advise, and counsel, among other things, the incoming members of our Silliman community. All FroCos attend summer training in preparation for this coveted role, and will be some of the first faces to greet you as you arrive to campus. Excessive Noise: Amplifiers, stereos, musical instruments, radios, and the like should be used with consideration for other college residents. They must not be played so loudly as to invade the rights of others. Quiet hours are in effect after 11 PM Sunday-Thursdays and after 1 AM Friday and Saturday. Violators risk disciplinary action, and persistent offenders may be required to vacate University housing.

Pets: Students are not allowed to keep pets in the college. The presence of any animal in student rooms constitutes a problem for public health and sanitation.

Smoking: The colleges at Yale are smoke-free zones. Smoking is not permitted in any building in Silliman, including student rooms, entryways, etc. Please smoke outside and only where cigarette receptacles are located.

Smoke Detectors: As the first line of defense against fire, these should be operating at all times. Never remove batteries from detectors. Tampering with smoke alarms or removing the batteries is punishable by a $100 fine.

Security: For your own safety, the Head and the University Police strongly urge you to keep your room locked at all times. Entryway and basement doors and the four gates to the College should also be kept locked at all times; please do not prop doors open. Broken locks should be reported without delay to the Head of College Office.

Insurance: Yale University does not carry insurance on personal property and is not responsible for any items belonging to students. Insurance on property must be arranged privately.

CUSTODIAL

Facilities Superintendent – Ms. Jeanne Wilson is the Facilities Superintendent at Silliman. She is responsible for supervising the cleaning and maintenance of the entire College. All questions about maintenance, bathrooms, and furnishings should be addressed to her email or her office in the Grove Street archway (203-432-0706).

Room Inspections: During the year, the Fire Marshal periodically makes fire and safety inspections of rooms. For reasons of health and safety, students should maintain reasonable standards of cleanliness and order in their rooms. Health and fire hazards will not be tolerated. Remember that occupants are held responsible for any and all property damage within the suite, including damage caused by guests. Electrical space heaters, cooking equipment, microwave ovens, and other heavy-duty electrical appliances violate the fire code and are subject to confiscation by the Fire Marshal. Explosives, firecrackers, and firearms are prohibited.

Recycling: Yale is required by Connecticut law to recycle 9 types of items, including office paper, newspaper, glass bottles and jars, cans and corrugated cardboard. Yale uses single-stream recycling.

BICYCLE RACKS

Bicycle racks are located near the Wall Street, College Street, and Grove Street gates. Please do not store bicycles in the stairwells as this violates state fire laws. Items blocking stairwells and fire doors may be confiscated by order of the Fire Marshal. Also, please do not chain bikes to trees or benches in the courtyard.

FACILITIES

Silliman is constantly improving its facilities and the Head of College works closely with students to determine how to make Silliman even better. We're eager to hear your ideas! INTRAMURALS

Silliman was a THREE TIME Tyng Cup Champion (2006, 2007, 2008)! Help Silliman take back the Tyng this year! Get in touch with the secretaries, and try to play at least one sport each season. Play soccer against Pierson or inner tube water polo against JE! All students — regardless of ability — are invited to defend the Silliman banner against other colleges in intramural competitions. The college that scores the most points in Intramural competition is awarded the prestigious Tyng Cup. You don't have to know how to play: we will explain the rules of the game to you, so don't be shy! It's a wonderful opportunity to have fun and meet people and take a break from studying. Check the IM white board in Byers Hall for announcements and schedules, and to see which sports are in season. IM secretaries are listed on the Silliman website, so feel free to contact the secretaries for more information. Remember to take a selfie with your Team to earn 2 Buttery Bucks for snacks at the buttery with every IM you play!

SILLIRINGERS

James Osborn, a former Fellow of Silliman, gave the College a magnificent set of Schulmerich handbells which offer a chromatic range of three full octaves. Anyone interested in performing in a group with these handbells should contact the Head of College Office. Performances by the Silliringers — who, in the words of former Head Brownell, “practice for minutes and minutes” before performing — is a holiday tradition.

SILLISIBS

Each year, some upperclassmen volunteer to be “Sillisibs” for incoming first-years, and you too will be a part of a “Silli-family.” Towards the beginning of the year, there will be a social event in Silliman for Sillisibs to get to know one another. Towards the end of the year, there will be an opportunity for you to extend your Silli-family and volunteer to be a Sillisib to someone in the Class of 2022.

TIES

Tutoring in Elementary Schools (TIES) is the largest community service organization at Yale. Founded in 1990 by a junior in Silliman, it has since spread to every other residential college. Silliman's TIES volunteers may choose either to tutor a child at Celentano, the elementary school with which Silliman is affiliated, or to teach an after-school class there through the Extended Day program.

FELLOWS

Silliman College has over 100 Fellows – faculty members – representing most of the departments and schools of the University. There are also over 100 Associate Fellows – distinguished members of the New Haven community. The Fellowship offers the faculty an opportunity for greater contact with students. A Silliman Fellow can serve as your college advisor. They also give seminars, join the students for social occasions, and participate in many events in the College. Invite a Fellow to join you for a meal – he or she will probably be delighted to accept.

The College also provides a relaxed atmosphere where members of different departments can become acquainted. A physicist and a classicist may find that they have much in common and become fast friends. These interludes are significant in building unity and spirit within the University and in making it an exciting place to work— all of which results in a stronger faculty, to the ultimate benefit of the students.

Silliman also has a set of residential Faculty Fellows. This year, they are Amin Karbasi, Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering at SEAS, and his wife Marjan Karbasi; Joe Fischel, Assistant Professor of Women's, Gender & Sexuality Studies, and his husband Igor DeSouza, Lecturer in Directed Studies and in English and an Associate Research Scholar in Judaic Studies.
